

I&C, Inversión y Cooperación (Investment and Cooperation) is a Spanish foundation with international projection, whose mission is to promote charity projects and development cooperation programs.

The Bolívar family, founder of the Spanish companies Expert Timing Systems (“ETS”), TechRules.com and Open Sea, is also the initiator of this Foundation.

I&C brings forward a new means of gathering a regular and stable flow of financial resources to safeguard the continuity in the promotion of social engagement projects. It presents institutional or individual investors the chance to sponsor these projects through their financial investments’ entailment with each project.

I&C selects and audits welfare and development cooperation projects (both locally and overseas) under a rigorous methodology. Currently, there are several welfare projects under way in Spain, the Congo and Perú.

What is I&C’s offering to the investors?

I&C provides the investors with an exclusive and high added value financial advise service. This service is free, independent and absolutely uninterested. It is highly valuable –although not exclusive- to families and non-for-profit organizations willing to improve the performance of their investments. On the other hand, I&C also grants the opportunity of teaming up, through these investments, with the social aid projects that are carried out at each moment.
